Dear Applicant,

Thank you for inquiring about our primary care fellowship program. I am enclosing a brief description of the program and application materials.

There are three parts to the application. The first is our standard application; please complete it as instructed. The second is a personal statement describing the reason for your interest in this program including your career goals and how these can be facilitated by acceptance into the Fellowship Program. You may want to explain how past experiences influenced your decision to apply and mention special areas of interest. Please limit this to one page. Third, we request letters of recommendation and the completion of a confidential reference form by three individuals, one of which should from your residency program director. All pieces of the application should be emailed to Linda.Neville@bmc.org

Applications are considered on a rolling basis. Once we have all three parts, your application will be reviewed, and we will contact you if we would like for you to come to BMC to interview.

Sincerely,

Jane Liebschutz, MD, MPH
Director, Combined Family Medicine, General Internal Medicine, Pediatric Primary Care Fellowship

Michelle St. Fleur, MD
Director, Family Medicine Fellowship

Megan Bair-Merritt, MD, MSCE
Director, Pediatrics Fellowship

Primary Care Academic Fellowship Program
Boston Medical Center

The fellowship is based in the Departments of General Internal Medicine, Family Medicine and General Pediatrics at Boston University School of Medicine and Boston Medical Center. BMC has over a 100-year history of caring for the poor and underserved. And much of our research and many of our programs focus on improving the lives of these populations. The clinical service has approximately 2,000 admissions and 75,000 ambulatory visits each year. The residency is combined with Boston Children’s Hospital.

A Faculty Development Award from the Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA), along with institutional funding, support the fellowship. The training program is two to three years in length; over half of all trainees stay in the program for three years. Eighty percent of our graduates go on to pursue careers in academia.

The primary objective of the fellowship is to develop research competency, so that trainees can become successful independently supported physician-scientists. The specific objectives are to:

1. Gain experience and knowledge in research design;
2. Master statistical methods used in research and the interpretation of the medical literature;
3. Understand the importance of appropriate statistical consultation;
4. Become familiar with the problems and challenges of performing research;
5. Conduct, analyze, present and publish the results of independent research projects in areas reflecting the objectives of Healthy People 2010;
6. Complete at least one research project, culminating in a presentation and publication;
7. Prepare a grant application prior to completion of the training program; and
8. Develop skills in other areas that contribute to academic success, such as teaching and communication.

The development of research competency is accomplished through intensive mentoring and by coursework at Boston University School of Public Health leading to either a Masters of Public Health or a Masters of Science of Epidemiology or Biostatistics. Research seminars, participation in the CREST (K30) BUSM training program, completion of both directed and independently developed research projects, teaching seminars, regular journal clubs and attendance at regional and national research/scientific meetings are also part of the curriculum.

Eligible candidates for fellowship training are physicians who have completed residency training in pediatrics or medicine/pediatrics, who intend to build academic careers in primary care and to focus on medically underserved populations and other high risk groups, and who are US citizens or permanent resident aliens.
