

What is Parkinson's?

Parkinson's disease is a progressive neurological disease that affects a small area of nerve cells (neurons) in the brain. These cells normally produce dopamine, a chemical that coordinates smooth and balanced muscle movement. Parkinson's disease causes these nerve cells to die, and as a result, body movements are affected.

What Are the Symptoms of Parkinson's Disease?

Muscle rigidity, Tremors, Bradykinesia (the slowing down of movement and the gradual loss of spontaneous activity), Changes in walking pattern and posture, Changes in speech and handwriting, Loss of balance and increased falls

Who Gets Parkinsons Disease?

Approximately one million Americans have Parkinson's disease, including three out of every 100 people over the age of 60. Over 50,000 Americans are diagnosed with Parkinson's disease each year. There is increasing evidence that Parkinson's disease may be inherited (genetically passed on between family members). Men are slightly more likely to develop the disease than women.

About the tournament

This is the Year 4 of a tournament started in 2008 by Bob Tullis and a great group of 24 volunteers. In our first 3 years we raised almost $40,000 to support those who live with Parkinson's. To find out how you can volunteer, contribute, seek support, or learn more about the disease please visit us at www.apdama.org or Facebook.

Thank for your past and future support.
Bob.
